Window in Da' Hood gives us insight into why minorities are not involved in the animal rights struggle. Eldon Brown explains the many experiences of African Americans/Blacks and Puerto-Ricans living in the inner-city ghettos. The title is based on Brown's view of the world from his living room out the window and into the hood. As an activist in more than one movement, Brown addresses the issues of cross-over as a minority in the Animal Rights movement.
