Bridget Geegan Blanton

It is 1884. Kate O'Reilly stares resolutely into the wind on deck of the Golden Vanity, as the shoreline of her beloved Ireland disappears behind a veil of mist. Even now, she resists the possibility that happiness could be found in America. It is her father's dream, not her own. The story of Kate's personal journey begins amidst the mystical beauty of Glengarriff, Ireland. She learns early that love and laughter help to ease a soul's burden in life. Kate O'Reilly just 17, has the pedigree of an Irish peasant and the confidence of a Celtic Warrior Queen. Out of a sense of duty, Kate follows her parents to America and leaves behind a dream for her own future in Ireland, the country she loves. At the end of the ocean voyage, Kate is beset by tragedy. A boiler explodes and accelerates ferociously into an inferno of fire and chaos. Kate survives the terrifying shipwreck. Her parents do not. In the days that follow, she is initiated into adulthood through a baptism of heartache and adversity. Accompany Kate from the rugged Irish shoreline, through Chicago and on to the verdant mountain valley of Santa Ynez, California where she finds love, happiness and meaning for her life.
